Do you feel there should be some zone representation on the District Board or would "at large" be okay? Don't know what "at large" means. At Large is fine Some form of regional representation would be goid At Large is fine Some zones At Large is fine Some zones At Large is fine Some zones At Large is fine At Large is fine Some zones Some zones Some zones At large from 2-3 geographical areas. Do we need/want representation like the House of Representatives? At Large is fine

What are the five best things (pros) about having zones or zone activities?

meeting new people, getting new ideas, seeing what other lodges have for activities After much thought I see no purpose for having a zone Officer installation provides a link to D5 activities provide chance to meet members of other lodges who have similar ideas Meeting people face to face. I do not like zoom meetings I've never been to a shared Zone activity except when I was on the District board in California

•formal protocol for governing purposes  $\hat{a}$ €¢system is already in place and is easy to continue with what we have been doing.  $\hat{a}$ €¢

Person to person contact; idea sharing; encouragement; interaction, supporting 1.It was nice sharing ideas with people who have the same lodge position as you. 2. It is very nice getting to know each other. 3. Having meetings sort of keeps you on track. 4.You cqn do bigger things if you do them together. 5. Sharing resources is helpful.

Dedicated resource for that zone. Smaller group to work with.

Meeting like-minded people face-to-face, hearing about their activities and ways of resolving certain issues, getting ideas to bring back to the lodge that might be successful, developing personal relationships with other lodge members with whom we can participate in other activities.

Ideas from others, visiting with other members,

Find out what other lodges are doing. Get new ideas.

meet lodge leaders; share lodge problems and information; have lodges interact and share problems, concerns and membership positive activities getting to know other members, finding new activities to do at meetings

Getting to know the people and encouraging them.

Larger population- greater activity and help. Pool Resources- but this doesn't seem to happen. Have a (optional) zone convention/activity on the alternate year of the D5 convetion.

Leadership training, social aspects, supporting each other, sharing ideas and programs, we have done joint activities

What are the biggest challenges (cons) of having zones or zone activities?

Traveling distances Distance Distance time schedule, traveling, willing able leadership travel time, weather, deer DISTANCE Distance •zone activities are extremely hard to schedule for a reluctant audience. •zone activities seem to need to be entertaining nowadays compared to the learning from serious training back in the 80's. •zone training is viewed by many "experienced " members as boring. •certain areas have difficulty finding people to serve on the Board.

Travel

To find time to meet; to find a centralized location; how to deal with universal concerns of inactivity in our lodges.

1. Finding a date that is good for most people. 2. Finding a location that is good for most people.

3.Getting a presenter . 4. It seems to be a problem finding "qualified" candidates to be directors. 5. It's hard to find willing candidates to be directors.

Distance between some lodges in zones can be challenging. Inconsistency of activities between zones.

In Zone 6, the biggest challenge for most people is the distance between lodges. That doesn't stop a few members but it is a valid excuse for most.

Scheduling, distance sometimes

Travel requirements are too great. I'm in Michigan.

travel may be too far for the zone director travel distances, time to go

Getting the lodges to follow through on suggestions to keep lodge active and growing.

Need people to plan and carry out. Grass root support (time, money, people), Too much already in members' lives

In other zones, the distance between lodges is the biggest obstacle. Having zone directors who are comfortable with virtual platforms has been a challenge in reaching out to their assigned lodges.

Do you feel that visits from your zone director have been helpful?

Not really Not really Yes- nice but not critical Not really Yes- nice but not critical Yes- very helpful Yes- nice but not critical Not really Yes- nice but not critical Yes- nice but not critical Yes- very helpful Not really Yes- very helpful

Other comments that you have about pros and cons of zones

Zones should be seperated into areas where the lodges are close to have meetings together as far as possible.

At this point in time with the internet and zoom, totally see no purpose for zones.

Zones are not really needed in this day and age

I feel the zone assignment may feel like a restriction.

Zones, if continued, should not be by lodge membership, but by location

I think not having zones could provide freedom to interact with more lodges without the feeling of borders constraining where we should go.

Work together with other zones; provide virtual for those who can not attend in person.

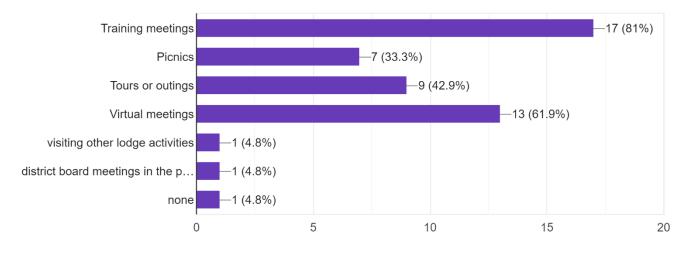

I think if we do away with Zones and the Zone Director that we are doing an injustice to the District. We're still trying to figure out how to work post-pandemic so we should keep trying to rebuild and grow more ideas for all lodges to become better and more creative. Directors we are doing our District an injustice. I am not in favor with doing away with Zones. I think we need to continue to build them up because we hjave undergone a close-down because of the pandemic and now we need to come on strong to rebuild and grow what our lodges together can

I found it helpful to get lodge presidents and officers meet with other lodge officers

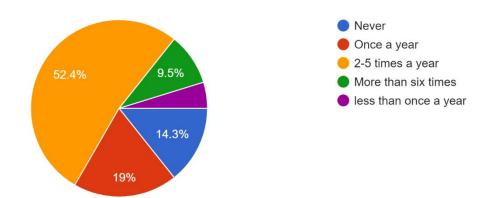

The needs, capabilities, interests, ect of the "urban" populous northern vs the southern part of the District are different and unique.
