Mar OG APRIL 2026

Fra presidenten:

It's always great to start my Presidenten letter by welcoming new members to Vennligfolk Lodge! A big "Velkommen" to John & Anne Rock, our newest members. Our lodge continues to grow, with our most recent count of 82 members.

This year the Portage County Cultural Festival is on Saturday, May 2. Our lodge has participated in this annual event since its beginning over 25 years ago. It is a wonderful way to promote Vennligfolk Lodge, and it is our only fundraiser for the year. Our members have always been so generous with volunteering to provide Scandinavian baked goods, make lefse, and work at the Cultural Festival. At our March 8 meeting, you will have the opportunity to again sign up to help with this fundraiser.

In my January letter, I wrote about the rising cost of providing refreshments for our lodge meetings and asked for your input. Thank you to everyone who responded. Our officers discussed this further at our last Officers' Meeting in February where it was decided to provide up to a $75 reimbursement each month to the group who provide the refreshments, starting with the new season of Vennligfolk Lodge meetings in September. It will be up to the servers to decide how this money will be used. Perhaps servers might want to use it for ordering out part of the food, or perhaps just divide it up evenly. Please realize that changes may need to be made as we work through this. The fellowship while enjoying that tasty food is an important part of our lodge meetings, and we definitely want it to continue.

Can you believe we are already planning for Midtsommer in June? Yes, we have set the date for this traditional summer picnic. It will again be at the South New Hope Church grounds. For several years we enjoyed great weather while picnicking on the beautiful grounds of this historic Norwegian church. Unfortunately, the last two years Mother Nature has not cooperated, and we had to have our picnic in the basement of the church. Although that was fine, everyone enjoys being outside more. So, we have added a rain date this time. Midtsommer is set for Tuesday, June 23, with the rain date being Thursday, June 25.

Every two years, Sons of Norway District 5 has a convention. This summer, the convention will be held in Stoughton, WI on August 2-6. Every lodge in District 5 is strongly encouraged to send delegates to the convention. The number of delegates for each lodge is determined by the number of members in your lodge. Vennligfolk Lodge is entitled to send 3 delegates to convention. Arno & I have attended many of the past conventions, and we feel it is time to open this to other members of Vennligfolk Lodge. Delegates are only required to attend on August 5 & 6. The lodge pays for the convention fee and the lodging. Yes, there are required meetings at the convention, but there are also a lot of interesting presentations, classes and Scandinavian vendors. If interested in going to the convention opportunity, please let me know ASAP.

Hilsen, Susan Morton

OLE AND LENA'S BRIGHT NEW LIFE

By Tom Johnson

After years of being at the center of many stories and jokes that made fun of them, Ole and Lena finally found some good fortune. Their son, Ole Jr., had started slowly in life, but he finally buckled down and was able to go to law school to become a lawyer, proudly graduating at the bottom of his class. His motto was "Always leave room for improvement." With his newly acquired skills, Ole Jr. was able to work out a copyright deal with all the joke book publishers that would provide royalties to Ole and Lena for the rest of their lives.

With their newfound wealth, Ole and Lena were each able to start a business of their own that related to their favorite things. Ole started a lutefisk processing business that he called "Olefisk," after his favorite person. Lena started a lefse factory where she produced "Luscious Lena's Luscious Lefse." Ole Jr. took on the job of managing both businesses for his parents.

Lena Jr. had gone to school to be a mortician, an occupation that Ole had warned against, because he said it was a "dying business." Despite this warning, Lena Jr. became quite good at her job. So good that she tried to get Ole to pre-plan his funeral. Of course, Ole had his own peculiar ideas about this. He insisted that he would only agree if he could be buried in his outhouse. Ole hated indoor bathrooms, claiming that even animals know enough to "do their business" outside, and had built an outhouse in the backyard, "on the sly." He would even sit in the outhouse with the door open and conduct business from it. He insisted that when people saw him in the outhouse with his pants down, it would get people all flustered, and he would get a better deal from them just so they could get away. He believed that "a man has got to have an edge."

Lena Jr. had to think quickly and told Ole that it would be hard to bury him in his outhouse because of regulations. But knowing that Ole had been in the Norwegian Navy and was very patriotic, she suggested that they could put him in a regular coffin, but bury it standing upright, facing the flagpole. That way, when there was a funeral where "Taps" was played, he would always be standing at attention. Upon hearing this, Ole was hooked and told Lena Jr. that "It sounds so wonderful that it almost makes me wish that I was dead!"

One day, Ole went to visit Lena at her lefse factory, where he found her working in the gift shop. She carried everything lefse in the shop, with all the usual items such as rolling pins, griddles, and sticks, but also carried lefse jewelry such as lefse shaped earrings, necklaces, and bracelets. She even carried men's and women's undergarments imprinted with lefse shapes. Lena was usually in a good mood, but today, when Ole arrived, she cornered him and said that something she had read in one of the joke books had bothered her. The joke book said that the two of them were in a restaurant and some of the men were saying romantic things to their wives, like "Pass the sugar, Sugar," or "Pass the honey, Honey." But you told me, "Pass the tea, Bag!" Or another time when you were trying to think of new pet names for me, you came up with Sugar Bag, Honey Pot, and Sweetie Pile! Is that what you really think of me?

Upon hearing this, Ole knew that he needed to patch things up with Lena. He told Lena that those were just practice names, and he had come up with a new name that he was sure she would like. "Lena, he burst out, you are my Lefse Lips!" These were the magic words that melted Lena's heart. "Oh, Ole, I love it. And you are my Lutey Boy!"

But Ole also had read something in a joke book that was bothering him, and he decided that now was the time to get it off his chest. He told Lena that a joke book also said that he had died, and that Lena had put an ad in the paper saying "Ole died. Boat for sale." Ole cried out in anguish, "Oh Lena, would you really sell my boat as soon as I died?"

Lena was as quick as lightning with her response. "Oh no, Ole, I would never dream of selling your boat!" She told him that instead, she would put an ad in the paper that said "Ole died. Almost young, beautiful widow looking for a strong, handsome young man to drive her around the lake in her late husband's boat." Hearing this, Ole was overwhelmed with joy that she wouldn't sell his boat. He told Lena, "Maybe we can take the boat out tonight, and I can pretend that you are an almost young, beautiful widow." To which Lena replied, "And I can pretend that you are a strong, handsome young man."

As they slowly motored around the lake as the sun was starting to set, Ole leaned over and whispered in

Lena's ear, "Oh Lena, you truly are my Lefse Lips!" To which Lena whispered, "And you, Ole, are truly my Lutey Boy!"

Are You Ready for Some Fotball !

Norway's Quest For 2026 World Cup Glory - By Carl Rasmussen, Editor

With the Winter Olympics completed, the main conversation and attention in Norway pubs and homes can now turn to the 2026 World Cup. Last Fall, the Norwegian "Landslaget" (National Soccer team) qualified for their first World Cup appearance in 28 years! This year the World Cup will be hosted across: Canada, Mexico, and the United States. With a total of 16 host cities, this should make the competition one of the most accessible World Cup tournaments for Norwegian Americans in history. No need to get up in the middle of the night! The matches will occur in all four U.S. time zones.

Our Jan-Feb Vennligblad described Norway's National Team's first match on Tuesday, June 16, 2026, in Boston's Foxborough Stadium at 5 PM CDT. Readers were encouraged to mark their calendars for this event.

This writer originally thought Norway's June 16 match would be a "one and done" with the winner advancing and loser headed home. UFFDA! Instead, the World Cup tournament begins with a "round-robin" play-in competition. To advance (or go home), Norway must first play two additional matches against two other national teams to determine their fate. So, my kind readers can also add Monday, June 22 at 7 p.m. CDT and Friday, June 26 at 2 PM CDT to your calendars for a total of three matches to watch!

Norway's first opponent (June 16) will be against the winner of a small play-in tournament between Bolivia, Suriname, and Iraq on March 26 and 31. Norway's June 22 opponent will be Senegal, Africa in East Rutherford, NJ. Senegal is described as a "powerhouse known for their incredible speed and physical play." Norway's third opponent is the formidable France, winner of the 2018 World Cup and first runner-up champion in 2022. France is the heavy favorite in 2026 and arguably one of the three best teams in the world. It will be an early test of Norway's strength. The June 26 match will be back in Boston. All games will be broadcast live on Fox TV.

Two teams advance out of Group One: the winner and the first runner-up. If Norway wins it all or comes in second place, their next match will be in Philadelphia on June 29 or New Jersey on June 30. These will begin true knockout matches all the way to the final World Cup. Pencil these two dates in as well!

Norway would need to win four additional knockout games to reach the "winner take all" World Cup Champion match. Dates and locations for these matches are determined by which bracket a team enters. A total of 48 teams begin the June competition. After all first round-robins finish, 32 teams move forward.

The tournament's pinnacle, the World Cup Championship match will be Sunday July 19 in MetLife Stadium in East Rutherford, NJ at 2:00 PM (CDT) on Fox TV.

The World Cup is often referred to the "Super Bowl of soccer. Yet, while the Super Bowl is huge in the United States with roughly 120 million viewers, the final World Cup on July 19 will be watched by over 1.5 billion people! It is the only sporting event that truly stops the entire planet every four years!

Odds of Winning: So, what are the chances of Norway advancing to the World Cup final? Are we pinning hopes on our hearts instead of our heads? Are we primed for let down by committing emotional energy to an unrealistic goal?

Fear not. Though the 28-year wait has been a long one for many "Landslaget" supporters, the timing could not be better. A confluence of generational riches has emerged and is ready to make a showing. Historically, while Norway has not consistently fielded a top-tier team since the 1990's, they currently are one of the most talked about teams in the world because they are entering the 2026 World Cup with their best squad in history. Norway's "Golden Generation" makes them a "dark horse" favorite.

During the grueling Cup qualification process, Norway famously won all eight of its matches handily. This includes a stunning 4-1 clincher against top-tiered Italy. Combined with a second match against Italy last June 2025, Norway did not just beat the Italians twice, they dismantled them 7 to 1 over two matches. Significantly, Norway's eight-game qualifying win streak was part of a larger 11 game win streak. The first three wins of the streak included high score breakouts against solid teams 12 goals to 1.

The average age of the current Norwegian squad is approximately 26 years old. In the world of professional soccer, this is often considered the "statistical peak." It means the players have moved past the inexperience of youth but have not yet hit the physical decline that comes in the early 30s.

Quest for World Cup Glory Continues on Page 6

Quest for World Cup Glory

While it takes a full squad to win, the following four players represent the heart, soul, and muscle of the "Golden Generation" of 2026 Landslaget. In the past, Norway usually had one or two "stars" supported by very hardworking, disciplined players. Norway 2026 has multiple players who are considered among the best in the world at their specific positions. They aren't just going to the World Cup to "take photos"—they are going with a realistic goal of reaching the Quarterfinals and beyond. This team is built on world-class attacking talent namely:

- Erling Haaland "The Viking Striker" who plays for Manchester City, England, age 25; A 6'5" "Viking" who grew up in Bryne, Norway. He is currently the most feared goalscorer in the world, having shattered records in the English Premier League.
- Martin Ødegaard Midfielder, "The Captain & Architect" Age: 27; who plays for Arsenal in North London, England. A child prodigy from Drammen who made his professional debut at age 15 and was signed by the legendary Real Madrid at just 16. He is the "engine room" of the team.
- Oscar Bobb, Winger, "The Rising Spark" plays for Manchester City, England, age: 22 Born and raised in Oslo, Bobb's journey took him from the local youth club to the prestigious Manchester City in England. If Haaland is the hammer, Bobb is the scalpel. A technical winger with dazzling "dancing" feet, he is known for his ability to weave through defenders in tight spaces. He represents the "new" Norway—creative, fearless, and world-class from a very young age.

- Kristoffer Ajer Defender, "The Defensive Anchor" age: 27 plays for Brentford, West London, England. The defensive anchor who will be tasked with stopping the likes of France's offense Though France is the titan of Norway's play-in group, Norway is widely expected to battle Senegal for the second-place spot and advance. As mentioned, in the World Cup 48 team format, the top two teams from each group and, the eight best third-place teams out of the 16, advance to the Round of 32.

Of the other Nordic countries, Sweden and Denmark still have play-in matches March 31 against different teams. Both can reach Round of 48 with wins. Both the Iceland and Finland teams have already been eliminated. The United States, Canada, and Mexico are already part of the 48 team first round play since they are all host countries.

Whether you are a lifelong fan or just looking for a reason to wear your Norway Reds and wave the Norsk Flag, this summer promises to provide a long remembered Midsummer. Stay tuned for additional World Cup details in the May-June issue of Vennligblad as the excitement builds!

Norway Tops the Winter Olympics Again!

Once again, Norway, a country with less population than Wisconsin, finished the 2026 Olympics with more gold medals and more total medals than any other country in the world! They continued with the most gold medals for the last four winter games 2014, 2018, 2022, 2026.

The Norwegians earned their gold primarily in cross-country skiing, biathlon, Nordic combined, ski jumping, and freestyle skiing. Johannes Klæbo earned a record setting six golds in cross-country skiing, making it the most titles ever won at a single Winter Olympics and breaking the record of five golds that had stood since Lake Placid 1980, set by U.S. speed skater Eric Heiden.

2026 Cultural Fest Lefse Making

Cultural Fest 2026 arrives one week earlier this year on May 2. Vennligfolk will be there making our popular “lefse fresh off the grill” all day. We make about 180 fresh lefse this way. The waiting lines are kept moving by including pre-made (but, just as tasty) lefse for sale.

Last year volunteer Lodge members made 120 of the pre-made Lefse using St Paul Methodist’s kitchen. The Rasmussens, Henslers and Bea Berg also made about 150 additional rounds at their homes.

This year Lodge Lefse coordinators, Lynn and Carl Rasmussen will assemble the volunteer group at their home in early April instead of St Pauls UMC kitchen. An email with details will be sent in mid-March with possible dates seeking volunteers. Help will be needed for potato preparation on the afternoon before and then rolling, flipping, and stacking the next morning. They will have at least three griddles grilling and flipping!

On the day before Cultural Fest, help will be needed Friday May 1 for peeling, cooking, and ricing 40 pounds of potatoes. This will be in St Pauls kitchen. On Saturday the morning of Cultural Fest, early help will be needed to roll the balls and pack them on ice for transport to SPASH. During the day we will need lefse rollers, flippers, butterers and sweeteners. This is the number one fund-raising event for the Lodge. Other opportunities exist to provide bake goods, help set up, work at our booth, and clean up. Watch for sign-up sheets at the March and April meetings to help!

a little in English... 50-øre's journey

Since the first 50-øre coin (then made of silver) was minted in 1877, hundreds of millions of such coins have circulated in Norwegian homes and shops. But 135 years later [in 2012], this has stopped. The 50-øre coin, which has existed in 10 different versions, will no longer be able to be used for payment.

In 2011, it was decided that after May 1, the 1-krone will be the least valued legal tender in Norway. Then, only Norges Bank will accept the little brown coins.

Filled up on 50 øre

People who have lived a little may remember that they could get quite a lot of candy for 50 øre a few decades ago. However, in the early 20th century people could make themselves a whole meal for fifty øre — which was probably fine, since many had an hourly wage that did not exceed 50 øre.

No longer in circulation

Trond Eklund, Director of Cash Payments at Norges Bank, explains why the 50-øre coin, which was produced at Kongsberg, will soon die.

“The reason is that it is no longer in circulation. We issue 15 to 20 million 50-øre coins each year. The shop returns the change, but the customers put them aside or put them in a jelly jar,” he says.

In recent years, 50-øre coins worth up to 10 million kroner have been issued by Norges Bank, but that is no longer the case. Inflation is the reason why the coins are slowly but surely dying out.

So now the 50-øre coin will suffer the same fate as the 25-øre (1982), 10-øre (1991), 5-øre (1982), 2-øre (1973) and 1-øre (1973).

litt på norsk... 50-øringens ferd

Siden den første 50-øringen (da av sølv) ble laget i 1877 har hundrevis av millioner av slike mynter sirkulert i norske hjem og butikker. Men 135 år senere [i 2012] er det stopp. 50-øringen som har levd i 10 forskjellige hovedversjoner, skal ikke lenger kunne brukes til å betale med.

I 2011 ble det bestemt at etter 1. mai er 1-kronen det minst verdifulle lovlige kontant-betalingsmiddelet i Norge. Da blir det bare Norges Bank som vil ta imot de små brune myntene.

Mett for 50 øre

Folk som har levd litt kan nok huske at de fikk ganske mye godteri for 50 øre for noen tiår tilbake. Men på begynnelsen av 1900-tallet kunne folk lage seg et helt måltid for femtiøringen — noe som nok var greit siden mange hadde en timelønn som ikke oversteg 50 øre.

— Sirkulerer ikke lenger

Trond Eklund, direktør for kontante betalingsmidler i Norges bank, forklarer hvorfor 50-øringen, som har blitt produsert på Kongsberg, snart skal dø.

- Årsaken er at den ikke lenger sirkulerer. Vi sender hvert år ut 15 til 20 millioner 50-øringer. Butikken gir tilbake veksel, men kundene legger dem til side eller putter dem på et syltetøyglass, sier han.

De siste årene har 50-øringer for opp mot 10 millioner kroner i verdi blitt sendt ut av Norges Bank, men nå er det slutt.

Så nå får 50-øringen samme skjebne som 25-øringen(1982), 10-øringen(1991), 5-øringen(1982), 2-øringen (1973) og 1-øringen (1973).
